From the Morgan State campus....

...to needy recipients in San Pedro Sula,
Honduras.

Project Diversion & Summary Report

Towson University, in partnership with Asset 360 LLC, has embarked on a new method for responsibly diverting campus surplus.

In seeking environmentally-sustainable solutions for campus waste, Towson redirected surplus furnishings originally targeted for disposal and diverted them to needy communities in the Central American country of Honduras.

Reuse, a higher option in the “waste hierarchy” than even recycling, is a viable solution to Towson’s weighty campus waste problem. Identifying communities devastated by natural disaster or impacted by economic hardship is the function that Asset 360 plays in the partnership.

In cleaning out the no longer needed furnishings in the Towson Run Apartments by diverting it for reuse, Towson gains the benefits of significant waste reduction, tremendous cost savings, impactful environmental data collection and social leadership within the local and higher ed communities.

As you’ll see in the data represented within this summary report, these efforts will provide long-lasting benefits to those within the Towson community. In addition, countless thousands of people not as fortunate will now gain further independence and comfort from that which was to be landfilled.
